WHEN: FRIDAY, July 26, 2013 at 9:30am

EDITOR’S NOTE: As one of the prerequisites to submitting a Phase 2 (and final) application to the Commission outlining the specifics of its proposal for a gaming establishment, all applicants must first be issued a positive determination of suitability by the Commission. The burden is on each applicant to establish its suitability to hold a gaming license by clear and convincing evidence. To that end, all applicants that submitted a Phase 1 application have subjected themselves to a thorough background investigation of all its qualifiers, both individuals and entities. The investigations are being conducted by the Investigations and Enforcement Bureau of the Commission.

Massachusetts Gaming Commission

As part of the investigations, the Bureau reviews such things as the integrity, honesty, good character and reputation of the applicant; the financial stability, integrity and background of the applicant; the business practices and the business ability of the applicant to establish and maintain a successful gaming establishment; and whether the applicant has a history of compliance with gaming licensing requirements in other jurisdictions. Based on its investigation, the Bureau will make a recommendation to the Commission relative to the suitability of each applicant. Once the recommendation is made to the Commission, the Commission must take affirmative action to essentially either adopt the recommendation and find the applicant suitable, reject the recommendation, or accept parts of it and reject others.

Additionally, the Commission may impose conditions upon the applicant in order for it to be issued a positive determination. In order to make this determination the Commission has scheduled proceedings in accordance with section 115 of its regulations. The proceedings may take one of two forms; they may either be a public hearing or an adjudicatory proceeding. Regardless of which type of proceeding is used by the Commission, no inferences should be drawn relative to the suitability of the applicant until a final decision is issued by the Commission. Typically, the Commission will utilize an adjudicatory hearing, which is a more formal proceeding than a public hearing, when it seeks to gain clear insight into a particular issue or issues that were identified in the course of the investigation. Oftentimes, those issues are of a complexity that do not lend themselves well to the more informal public hearing format. Both types of proceedings are open to the public and at the Commission's election will be streamed live on the Commission's website; the main distinction primarily involves the rules that apply. At the conclusion of an adjudicatory proceeding, unlike a public hearing which is subject to the Open Meeting Law, the Commission will deliberate in private and issue a written decision. Accordingly, the decision will not be issued the same day as the hearing. As long as an applicant is issued a positive determination of suitability by the Commission, it is inconsequential whether it was achieved as the result of a public hearing or an adjudicatory proceeding.
